

90-Year-Old Tennessee Flood Victim Praises God, Shares Miraculous Survival Story

Standing at his kitchen window, 90-year-old Buddy McNabb had an ark-like experience as he and his three dogs watched the water around his mobile home continue to rise.

A sheriff in Waverly, Tennessee, said Sunday at least 22 people died in the record-setting rain that precipitated devastating floods in Humphreys County.

McNabb—initially believing he would be among those who passed away—credited his miraculous survival to God during an interview with The Weather Channel.

The nonagenarian said he watched as other mobile homes around him floated down the street, recalling the water getting as high as his shoulders.

“I talked to God a little bit,” McNabb said. “He talked back. I was not afraid. He calmed me down, and we just stood there and watched.”

“I’m a believer,” he continued after the reporter asked him how he explains his survival. “God laid His hand on me. There ain’t a question in my mind. If a person does not believe in miracles,
