

Aliens Among Us: Are We Being Prepared for a Great Deception?

Something has shifted in our culture.

For decades, conversations about UFOs and extraterrestrials were confined to science fiction conventions, late-night radio shows, and fringe conspiracy circles. Today, however, governments openly discuss UAPs—Unidentified Aerial Phenomena. Military pilots testify before Congress. Major news networks treat the subject seriously. Streaming platforms release documentaries weekly. Hollywood continues to normalize the idea that humanity is not alone.

The question is no longer whether people are fascinated with aliens. The question is why this fascination is accelerating at such a dramatic pace.

Could it be that modern culture is being conditioned for a spiritual deception unlike anything the world has ever seen?

The Bible may not use the word “alien,” but Scripture speaks extensively about non-human intelligences, spiritual beings, powers in heavenly places, and entities that interact with humanity. The Apostle Paul warned believers that “we do not wrestle against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this age.”

What if many of the phenomena being interpreted as extraterrestrial are actually spiritual in nature?

That possibility deserves serious consideration.

Hollywood has long served as a prophetic echo chamber for cultural transformation. Entertainment often prepares the public psychologically before society embraces a new worldview. From Close Encounters of the Third Kind to Arrival, from Marvel multiverse narratives to endless alien invasion storylines, modern media repeatedly presents advanced non-human beings as either humanity's destroyers or humanity's saviors.

That distinction matters.

Because at the core of biblical prophecy is the warning that deception will intensify in the last days.

Jesus Himself said, "As the days of Noah were, so also will the coming of the Son of Man be." Most Christians interpret this only as a reference to moral corruption. But Genesis 6 presents something far stranger and far darker. The Bible says there were "giants" or Nephilim on the earth when the "sons of God" came unto the daughters of men.

To order L.A. Marzulli's book, Rungs of Disclosure, visit .

Ancient Jewish writings such as the Book of Enoch—while not considered Scripture by most Christians—expand on this narrative by describing rebellious spiritual beings known as Watchers who descended to earth, corrupted humanity, and introduced forbidden knowledge. These Watchers were associated with occult practices, warfare, sorcery, and technological corruption.

Whether one accepts every detail of Enoch or not, the New Testament writers clearly reference this tradition. Jude speaks of angels who "did not keep their proper domain." Peter similarly refers to angels who sinned and were cast into chains of darkness.

This is not mythology to the biblical writers. It is spiritual history.

And it may also point to spiritual realities returning in the last days.

Modern UFO encounters often involve phenomena that sound less like science fiction and more like spiritual manifestations. Many reports include paralysis, missing time, telepathic communication, altered consciousness, levitation, glowing beings, and messages about humanity evolving into a new spiritual age. These encounters frequently blur the line between the technological and the supernatural.

That should concern us.

The Bible warns that Satan masquerades as an “angel of light.” Deception rarely appears evil at first glance. It often appears enlightened, advanced, compassionate, and even salvific.

Could an “alien disclosure” movement eventually become the foundation for a new global spirituality?

Could humanity be persuaded that religion is outdated and that advanced cosmic beings are here to guide human evolution?

That scenario sounds extreme—until you realize many influential voices already promote versions of it.

The modern New Age movement increasingly merges extraterrestrials with spirituality. Terms like “ascended masters,” “light beings,” “star people,” and “cosmic consciousness” have entered mainstream vocabulary. Social media influencers openly discuss channeling entities. Psychedelic experiences are celebrated as pathways to hidden dimensions. Ancient paganism is being rebranded for the digital age.

Yet the Bible consistently warns believers not to seek spiritual revelation outside of God.

One of the most fascinating details in Scripture appears in Daniel 2:43, where Daniel describes a future kingdom in which “they will mingle with the seed of men.” Scholars debate the meaning of this passage, but its wording is undeniably strange. Who are the “they”? Why is there an emphasis on mingling with humanity?

Jesus connected the end times directly to the “days of Noah,” suggesting patterns from Genesis may re-emerge before His return.

Perhaps we are watching the early stages of that now.

None of this means every unidentified object in the sky is demonic. Some sightings likely involve advanced military technology. Others may remain unexplained natural phenomena. Christians should avoid sensationalism and paranoia.

But believers should also avoid naïveté.

The spiritual realm is real.

The Bible describes angels, fallen angels, principalities, powers, cherubim, seraphim, and heavenly hosts. Scripture presents a universe alive with spiritual activity. To dismiss all supernatural phenomena simply because modern culture labels it “alien” is intellectually and spiritually shortsighted.

At the same time, Christians must resist fear.

The answer to deception is not obsession with darkness. It is greater discernment rooted in Christ.

Too many believers spend more time studying UFO documentaries than studying Scripture. Our calling is not to become consumed with speculation but to remain spiritually awake. The enemy’s greatest strategy has always been counterfeiting truth.

In Egypt, Pharaoh’s magicians imitated Moses’ miracles. In the New Testament, false prophets performed signs and wonders.

Revelation warns of deceptive supernatural displays in the last days. Satan's kingdom thrives through imitation.

That is why discernment is critical.

The Church cannot afford to become biblically illiterate in an age of increasing spiritual confusion. A generation raised on Marvel superheroes, artificial intelligence, virtual reality, and cosmic mythology may struggle to distinguish between technological wonder and spiritual deception.

And perhaps that is precisely the point.

The battle before us is not merely political or cultural. It is spiritual.

The Apostle Paul called Satan "the prince of the power of the air." That phrase takes on startling new relevance in a world increasingly fascinated with mysterious aerial phenomena.

As conversations about aliens, disclosure, and non-human intelligence continue to intensify, Christians must approach the subject with both wisdom and biblical clarity. We should neither mock the discussion nor surrender to sensationalism. Instead, we should ask deeper questions. The greatest issue is whether humanity can still recognize truth in an age of unprecedented deception.

Phil Hotsenpiller is the Founder of American Faith and Senior Pastor of Influence Church in Anaheim Hills, California. A theologian, cultural commentator, and author, he speaks on leadership, faith, and national renewal.

This article originally appeared on American Faith and is reposted with permission.