

'Amazing Grace' Breaks Out in Powerful White House Moment!

The White House continues to be a house of praise and worship.

Yesterday, as Dr. Malachi O'Brien reported, the White House Faith Office leaders Paula White-Cain and Jenny Korn found something incredibly powerful in the Treaty Room: an ongoing time of worship to the Lord.

These moments of praise and prayer that have become more common to the Trump administration are not isolated events—they represent a shift in the spiritual atmosphere of Washington, D.C. With worship rising from rooms once used solely for diplomacy and policy, the culture of the White House is being shaped by the presence of God.

Are we on the brink of the next revival in America? Only time will tell. For now, let's thank the Lord for the continued protection of the Christian faith in our nation.
