The top 20 contestants each brought their own spiritual flavor to the stage, choosing songs that spoke to redemption, grace and victory. Carrie Underwood delivered a passionate version of “How Great Thou Art,” while Lionel Richie shared his testimony before performing a heartfelt “Eternity.”

This Easter special was more than a showcase of talent—it was a declaration of faith. In a time of cultural uncertainty, American Idol reminded us that the Gospel still has power to reach hearts through music. It was more than music; it was ministry. Each song became a sermon, each voice a vessel for hope. The unified message was clear: Jesus is alive, and He’s still transforming lives.
