

Andraé Crouch Gets Good News, but Prayer Still Critical

UPDATE: Crouch has gone home to be with the Lord. Click here for more details.

Earlier this week, we reported on Andraé Crouch's medical emergency. Sandra Crouch, sister of the legendary gospel singer, said her brother was taken to the hospital this past Saturday to address "some serious health complications that have arisen."

"We are also so grateful for the many thousands of people around the world who are praying for Andrae' right now," she said. "We ask for your continued prayer that Andrae' will respond positively to the medical attention being given to him at this time, and that he will fully recover from this current health complication."

Those prayers are working. Crouch, who was hospitalized since Jan. 3, has had some positive response to the medical attention that has been given to him.

"The medical team has given some encouraging news and we are so grateful for the many thousands of people who are praying on behalf of my brother," a Facebook posts reads. "With the continued medical attention and your prayers, we are trusting the Lord for a full recovery."
