

As President, Mike Huckabee Believes God Would Help Him Eliminate This Evil

If Mike Huckabee is elected president in 2016, he says he'll have God's blessing to eliminate the "secular theocracy" that's governing the United States.

"Our country is in real trouble ... we've divorced ourselves from an understanding that we cannot survive as a republic if we do not become, once again, a God-centered nation that understands our laws do not come from man, they come from God, the natural law of God," Huckabee tells James Robison in Life Today.

Robison says the laws ruling our nation are a theocracy, just a "secular" one, and Huckabee agrees.

"It's humanistic, atheistic, even antagonistic toward Christian faith. And that's what we need to understand," Huckabee says. "Our basic, fundamental rights are being robbed from us, taken from us piece by piece."

The former Fox News correspondent says that if he were to be elected president, it must be with God's blessing.

"You know, the only thing worse than not being elected president would be to be elected president without God's blessing," Huckabee says. "I can't think of a worse place in the world to be than in the Oval Office without God's hand upon you. I'd rather not get near the place."
