

At Least 3 Students Injured in California School Shooting

At least three students were injured during a high school shooting in Southern California today.

The shooting was reported early Thursday morning at Saugus High School near Los Angeles. The suspect has not been caught, according to police, but is believed to be a part of the student body.

The Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department tweeted that the suspect is a "male Asian" wearing black clothing:

#LASD Shooting at Saugus High School , Please avoid the area. Male Asian suspect black clothing last seen at the location. Deputies on scene and still responding. Avoid the area Further information to follow.

– LA County Sheriffs (@LASDHQ) November 14, 2019

The three injured students have been taken to nearby hospitals for treatment.

Earlier reports indicated at least six students were injured, but the Associated Press says the inaccurate number may have been due to duplicate reports.

Please pray for all those involved in this shooting.