

Belhaven University Expands Online Degree Program

Belhaven University is expanding its online program and giving potential students five more reasons to earn their degree online. Five new degrees that range from associate, bachelor's, and master's were added to Belhaven's online catalogue.

Specifically, a Bachelor of Business, Bachelor of Health Administration, Master of Sports Administration, Master of Health Administration and an Associate of Arts in Business are now available through Belhaven's online program.

"We are excited about expanding our online offerings because it allows us to reach even more students who are interested in a Christ-centered education but need the flexibility to take their classes at home and on their own time," says Kevin Russell, vice president for University Advancement at Belhaven.

"While the programs are academically rigorous, the personal attention students receive during the admission process and once they enroll allows them to focus on their number one priority ... obtaining their degree."
