

Beth Moore Reveals the One Thing Houstonians Do Not Want After Harvey

Houstonians are jumping in to help their fellow neighbors after Harvey wreaked havoc on their city and surrounding areas. Among the volunteers: Beth Moore.

The popular author and speaker went to Target recently to stock up on snacks—and coffee!—to give away. During her trip, though, she discovered the one thing her city does not want in a time of crisis: healthy popcorn.

As I gather snacks for relief volunteers, I would like to go on record saying we Houstonians do not look to Skinny Pop in times of crisis.

– Beth Moore (@BethMooreLPM) August 30, 2017

Moore tweeted her pictures—and positive attitude—for followers to enjoy. Here's a sampling:

The thing is, we need comfort. We need chicken fried steak flavored goldfish.

– Beth Moore (@BethMooreLPM) August 30, 2017

@ChristineCaine I threw these in the grocery basket for snacks for relief volunteers on your behalf, my friend! Will give them your regards.

– Beth Moore (@BethMooreLPM) August 30, 2017

Ben. You know it's true. I'd like to chair a committee on Houston grocery store preparations for future crises. We need comfort. Calories.

– Beth Moore (@BethMooreLPM) August 30, 2017

Gonna keep telling til you believe me about the heart of Houston. Manager Felicia insisted on giving me a discount since it was for relief.

– Beth Moore (@BethMooreLPM) August 30, 2017

Did not know me from Adam. She just kept saying “God bless you.” I could’ve cried. This, folks, is Houston Texas no matter what else happens.

– Beth Moore (@BethMooreLPM) August 30, 2017

Showing y’all 1 of our church distribution centers underway for relief volunteers coming tomorrow. Lots more supplies & tools on their way.

– Beth Moore (@BethMooreLPM) August 30, 2017