

Biden DHS Labels 2025 Election Certification a 'National Special Security Event'

The United States Secret Service has labeled Jan. 6, 2025, the day the presidential election is certified, as a "National Special Security Event."

Eric Ranaghan, the Special Agent in Charge of the U.S. Secret Service's Dignitary Protective Division, said that National Special Security Events are "events of the highest national significance," according to a press release.

Ranaghan explained that the Secret Service will design and implement a security plan for the event.

"The U.S. Secret Service, in collaboration with our federal, state, and local partners are committed to developing and implementing a comprehensive and integrated security plan to ensure the safety and security of this event and its participants," he said.

The announcement marks the "first time a National Special Security Event designation has been granted for a Certification of Electoral Votes and follows a request made by the DC Mayor to designate this event a National Special Security Event," the release notes.

An Executive Steering Committee will be formed to design the security plan.

According to Politico, the security designation aims to prevent a “reprise of the riot at the Capitol” in 2021.
