

Bishop Randy White Returns to Without Walls Church

Bishop Randy White has returned to Without Walls International Church. White will serve as the overseer for the Tampa, Fla., and Lakeland, Fla., campuses of the church he started with his ex-wife, Paula, in 1990.

"I am so thrilled to be back at Without Walls International Church," White wrote in an email newsletter to the congregation. "God has done a wonderful work in my life. He is the God of Restoration!!"

White resigned from Without Walls and handed the church over to Paula White in June 2009, citing ongoing health issues. Paula recently accepted the senior pastor position at New Destiny Christian Center in Apopka, Fla., which was founded by the late Zachery Tims and his then-wife Riva.

It is unclear if Paula will continue serving at Without Walls. However, Paula's name is not currently listed on the staff directory.

"I believe in Without Walls, and I know that God's hand is upon this great church," White wrote. "Let's fight and take back the city of Tampa for Jesus! Together, we CAN DO THIS!"

White also informed Without Walls via his Facebook page that "I am now going to be the overseer Bishop of Tampa and Lakeland."

Most of his Facebook followers were thrilled. Jennifer Gibson Baines posted on his Facebook page: "God does restore and put his people back in their rightful position. He's not through with them yet. We all have faults and we all have sins. With God's forgiveness we are white as snow and all our sins are washed away."
