

Brigitte Gabriel Connects Dots Between Radical Islam and Germany's Nazi Regime

If a minority of any group is radicalized and willing to hurt outsiders, does it matter if the rest of the group is peaceful? That's the question Brigitte Gabriel raises on The Jim Bakker Show.

"We cannot paint with a broad brush and say all Muslims are bad," Gabriel says. "The problem is while most Muslims are moderate, Islam itself as an ideology is a violent ideology. This is why—when you look at radical Islamist organizations around the globe today—what connects them together is the ideology."
