

CERN's Dark Secret: Are Scientists Unleashing Demonic Forces?

When most people think of CERN, they picture scientists in white lab coats smashing particles together in pursuit of knowledge. But what if there's more going on behind the scenes? What if the world's largest physics experiment is dabbling in realms far beyond what we can see?

That's exactly what Josh Peck and L.A. Marzulli tackled in a fascinating discussion about CERN's experiments, quantum computing and their potential connections to biblical prophecy.

What's Really Happening at CERN?

CERN, home to the Large Hadron Collider near Geneva, Switzerland, is often hailed as the pinnacle of modern science. It's where researchers study the fundamental building blocks of the universe. But some of the statements made by CERN's own scientists raise serious questions about the nature of their work.

Marzulli doesn't mince words when it comes to his concerns.

"Why did one of the heads of CERN state, 'Well, you know, we open up this... we're not sure what might come through'?" That's not exactly comforting. If the scientists themselves aren't sure what they're messing with, should the rest of us be?

Peck agrees, adding, "These people are totally demonically infused, whether they know it or not." That's a strong claim, but not without reason. CERN has long been surrounded by strange occult symbolism, most notably the statue of Shiva, the Hindu god of destruction, which stands outside its headquarters.

Occult Rituals and Scientific Mysticism

One of the most unsettling aspects of CERN's history is the bizarre rituals that have taken place on its premises. Marzulli doesn't hold back when describing one infamous event: "You can go, you can watch the ceremony for yourself—a guy in a goat's head suit, you know, looking like Pan, doing his whole deal. What is that about?"

It's a good question. Why would a scientific institution be engaging in rituals that look more like something out of a pagan temple than a physics lab? Peck argues that many involved may not fully understand what they're participating in, but he's convinced that darker spiritual forces are at play.

Revelation 9: Are We Unlocking the Abyss?

If CERN was just another research facility, there wouldn't be much cause for concern. But what if their work has direct biblical implications? Peck points to Revelation 9, where the Bible describes a terrifying event in the last days, saying "To me, I immediately thought Revelation 9... That's a huge deal."

Revelation 9 speaks of a bottomless pit being opened, releasing demonic entities upon the earth. Could CERN's experiments inadvertently be the key to unlocking something far beyond their control?

The Push for Higher Dimensions

Scientists at CERN and in the quantum computing world frequently talk about higher dimensions—realities beyond our own that may intersect with ours. Peck explains, “Higher dimensions have already pretty much been proven because the universe is expanding—it needs something to expand into.”

This idea might sound like science fiction, but even secular researchers admit that our three-dimensional world may be part of something much larger. Peck continues, “If they’re using CERN to just look at particles, do some particle collision, see how nature runs, you know, that’s all they were doing, I wouldn’t have any problem with it. But then you got those people... who said, ‘Yeah, something else might come through.’”

That’s where the danger lies. What exactly do these scientists expect to come through?

Pay Attention

It’s easy to dismiss all of this as wild speculation. After all, CERN is a respected institution, backed by the brightest minds in physics. But history has shown us that great scientific advancements often come with unintended consequences.

Peck urges Christians to stay vigilant, “Pay attention to this kind of stuff, pay attention to how things are phrased, and don’t immediately dismiss it.”

That’s sound advice. The Bible warns of a great deception in the last days, and it wouldn’t be surprising if it came cloaked in the language of science and progress.

The bottom line? CERN might be opening more than just new frontiers in physics—they may be opening doors that should remain closed.
