

Child Dies in Hot Car While Parents Attend Bible Study

A child died after his family left him in a hot car while they attended separate Bible studies at a Dallas church, according to reports.

Each parent thought the other had removed the boy from the car. They discovered their mistake about 45 minutes into their studies.

"Every kid comes out of the main service room, and they would read the Bible and sing, and they would go back into that room," fellow church member Reng Om told media. The couple's son didn't enter with the rest of the children.

The father then ran to the car and brought his son inside.

"He looked like bad," Om said. "He was grabbing his kid, and the kid would not move, and said, 'I need somebody, help, call the police.'"

The child died later that evening in a hospital.

Please pray for the family as they deal with this tragedy.
