

Chinese Propaganda Outlet Picks Crazy Fight Over Mike Pompeo's Christian Faith

As a kid, I remember learning about taking personal responsibility for my actions, rather than trying to pass the blame off to someone else. Apparently, that's a lesson the Chinese Communist government is not interested in learning.

In the most awfully ironic way possible, China's state-run media, the Global Times, has launched a disinformation campaign against Secretary of State Mike Pompeo, and writers for the propaganda outlet are using the top diplomat's Christian faith to fuel their outlandish attack.

"It is widely known that Christian doctrine opposes lying – it's a sin," reads the shameless editorial, which goes on to foolishly suggest the coronavirus began spreading in the U.S. many months ago. "A false witness shall not go unpunished."
