

Church Fires Bisexual Priest After Wife Reveals Sordid Details of His Double Life

The Church of England fired Rev. James Day after his wife revealed sordid details of his bisexual double life, according to reports.

A CoE tribunal banned Day from ministry for life after they determined his “conduct unbecoming and inappropriate.”

“James had huge files on the computer, including images of modern art, but they were mixed up with pornographic images,” his wife detailed in a statement to the tribunal.

She later described images, videos and other sexually explicit material, including orgies and activities with multiple partners, allegedly including the priest.

According to the Telegraph, Day did not attend the tribunal but didn't contest the proceedings. In an email he claimed he had collected “dozens of letters” that would “cast serious doubt on the credibility of his wife.”