

Clinton to Obama: Keep Your Promise on Health Law

Former President Bill Clinton said President Barack Obama should honor his promise to the American people about keeping their health care.

"I personally believe, even if it takes a change in the law, the president should honor the commitment the federal government made to these people and let them keep what they got," Clinton said in an interview with the website .

Clinton also said the botched website rollout and allowing states to opt out of Obamacare are big problems.

But he said the country is better off with the law than without it.
