

CN Morning Rundown: 25-Year-Old Perry Stone Protege Stirs Up Revival, Hope in Decimated Area of West Virginia

Here's a quick summary of the top stories on :

25-Year-Old Perry Stone Protege Stirs Up Revival, Hope in Decimated Area of West Virginia

Nik Walker wants everyone to know that when he encounters sin, he won't back down in calling it out. But Walker also wants people to know that is not what his ministry is all about.

The 25-year-old evangelist, who has recently made headlines for helping to bring about revival in depressed areas of West Virginia, says he would much rather bring the authentic, genuine message of Jesus to the masses, a message that will give people, including the youth of America, hope for their future instead of the negative narrative fed to them daily by their schools and by culture.

Walker's humble strategy seems to be working. Sunday will mark the beginning of his fourth week preaching in West Virginia—his home state—and the results have been quite tangible. Hundreds of youth in schools, and others, attending multiple services at Christ Temple Church in Huntington have come to Christ. Many have been baptized into the kingdom in an incredible move of God that is beginning to capture the attention of the nation.

Why You Should Not Be Watching the Beijing Olympics

Last Friday's opening ceremonies may have tricked you into thinking Beijing's Olympics are an inclusive demonstration of international unity, but don't be fooled. For those who know where to look, there are telltale signs of a propaganda parade everywhere.

We have seen this before. When Berlin hosted the 1936 Olympics, the world already knew of Hitler's ongoing persecution of Jews. The games fueled his propaganda machine, positioning Nazi Germany as a benevolent and cooperative member of the international community while downplaying the massacre escalating at their hands.

The IOC's decision to award Beijing the 2022 Winter Olympics lets history repeat itself.

US Urges Canada to Use Federal Muscle to End Bridge Blockade

The Biden administration urged Prime Minister Justin Trudeau's government Thursday to use its federal powers to end the truck blockade by Canadians protesting the country's COVID-19 restrictions, as the bumper-to-bumper demonstration forced auto plants on both sides of the border to shut down or scale back production.

For the fourth straight day, scores of truckers taking part in what they dubbed the Freedom Convoy blocked the Ambassador Bridge connecting Windsor, Ontario, to Detroit, disrupting the flow of auto parts and other products between the two countries.

The White House said Homeland Security Secretary Alejandro Mayorkas and Transportation Secretary Pete Buttigieg spoke with their Canadian counterparts and urged them to help resolve the standoff. {eo}

Read articles like this one and other Spirit-led content in our new platform, CHARISMA PLUS.