Now, truckers in the U.S. are also organizing a protest where participants will drive all the way across the country from California to the U.S. Capitol in Washington, D.C.

Congregation Stunned as Aussie Police Interrupts Service to Enforce Mask Rule

Worshippers at a church in Perth, Australia, were flabbergasted when police officers interrupted their service to see who was–and wasn't–wearing masks.

One parishioner at St. Bernadette's Catholic Church in Mount Hawthorn named Matthew told local media it was "troubling" to see a police officer interrupt the worship service last Thursday evening, according to The Chronicle. In a separate interview with a radio station, he said everyone in the church was “pretty surprised” by the interruption and found it “pretty confronting.”

“Everyone was sort of pretty stunned, I suppose,” he said. “Then as soon as it started, it was sort of over as he left. ... It was just pretty confronting seeing police vests and stuff in the church. He didn’t remove his hat, which is pretty disrespectful in that environment.”
