Jonathan Cahn's Next 'Mind-Blowing' Prophetic Revelation Coming in Explosive New Motion Picture

After years of expectant waiting, the next revelation is finally here. Since the release of The Harbinger II: The Return in 2020, author Jonathan Cahn has been holding back the keys to a web of mysteries soon to be unlocked in his riveting feature motion picture, The Harbingers of Things to Come. This film, based on Cahn's bestselling and brilliant successes with The Harbinger book series, reveals the ancient mysteries that lie behind what is happening in America and the world today – and in the future.

Insiders are calling the film “stunning,” “prophetic,” “mind-blowing” and “astonishing.” Building on and retracing the enigmas of the first two books in The Harbinger series, The Harbingers of Things to Come continues the revelations where The Harbinger II: The Return left off.

In theaters across America on Thursday, May 12, 2022, Cahn will take audiences on an epic journey from the shores of New England to the steps of the Supreme Court, from a boat on the Hudson River to the pedestal of the Statue of Liberty, to explore the ancient mystery behind the event shaking America and the world. From 'Time's' 'Is God Dead?' in 1966 to 'The New York Times' Call to 'Give Up God' Today

On April 8, 1966, the pictureless front cover of Time magazine asked a bold and direct question: "Is God Dead?" This was just two days before Easter Sunday, and in the decades that followed it became increasingly common for anti-God, anti-Jesus, anti-Bible essays to be featured in various secular publications at this time of year.

Now, in keeping with this anti-God attitude during this sacred season, an April 15 op-ed piece for The New York Times was headlined, "In This Time of War, I Propose We Give Up God."

How deeply sensitive for the Times to post this anti-God essay on the day which is both Good Friday on the Christian calendar and the first day of Passover on the Jewish calendar! What a nice touch, editorial department! You have really outdone yourselves this year. (And a special shoutout to Liana Finck for her graphic, depicting God as an angry, Godzilla-like giant, marching through the city with terror on his mind.)

Larry Tomczak's Week in Review: The Year's Most Explosive Story They Didn't Want You to Hear

A soft explosion has taken place that even Bill Maher, The New York Times and The Washington Post are forced to admit.

The gig is up, and may God grant us mercy as a nation as the unbelievable expose is now going to change the Biden administration dramatically.

Take 10 to discover the answer to millions of our prayers.
