CN Morning Rundown: LA Dream Center's Matthew Barnett Suffers Brain Blood Clot and Stroke

Here's a quick summary of the top stories on :

LA Dream Center's Matthew Barnett Suffers Brain Blood Clot and Stroke

Los Angeles Dream Center founder Matthew Barnett, 49, posted online Thursday from his hospital bed that he has suffered a stroke and a blood clot on his brain.

Barnett posted this on his Instagram account Thursday:

"I'm in hospital being treated for a stroke. I was getting massage at the Glendale mall. When checking out, I was going to say thank to the guy when suddenly I couldn't talk. I couldn't speak one coherent word. It was like an alien took over my speech and I couldn't speak as my words slurred.

Rolling Stone Magazine Sends a Spy to Attack Sean Feucht in an Attempt to Stop the Gospel

With Jesus by his side, Sean Feucht isn't afraid of anything the secular culture can bring against him. Because of his boldness to preach the gospel anywhere, Feucht is being attacked and has become the target of many ultraliberal entities, which includes the iconic Rolling Stone magazine.

In 2020, Rolling Stone's Joseph Hudak wrote an article on Feucht called "Jesus Christ, Superspreader?" bashing the Christian preacher-musician for "ignoring COVID-19 precautions" as Feucht staged a Nashville concert that drew more than 10,000 people.

Today the magazine continues its attack on Feucht for his kingdom work, even attempting to place an infiltrator in the midst of his prayer group in Washington, D.C, which is diligently interceding for Roe v. Wade to be overturned by the Supreme Court.

Another Cataclysmic Error Threatens to Plunge the US Economy Into a Bottomless Pit

I can’t believe they actually did it. Even though it is painfully obvious that the U.S. economy is slowing down dramatically and that we are heading into an excruciating repeat of the housing crash of 2008, the Federal Reserve decided to go ahead with the largest interest rate hike in 28 years anyway.

History has shown us that raising rates just as an economy is entering a recession is an exceedingly foolish move, and many of us have been pleading with the Fed not to do it. But of course if the Fed actually listened to people like us, we would not be facing such a dire crisis in the first place.

Essentially, the Fed just killed any hopes of avoiding a recession. The rate hike that was announced on Wednesday was the largest that we have seen since 1994. {eoa}