

CN Morning Rundown: Netflix at It Again With More Child Porn, Christian Bashing

Here's a quick summary of the top stories on :

Netflix at It Again With More Child Porn, Christian Bashing

The fifth—and final—season of the animated Netflix series F Is for Family is just as provocative, offensive and grotesque as the rest of the series.

Created by Bill Burr and Michael Price, the characters of the obscene comedy cartoon spend most of each episode ridiculing Christian faith. The children in the show are also subjected to a great deal of stomach-churning sexualization.

In “Screw Ups,” the sixth episode of the new season, one of the show’s characters, Sue, takes her daughter Maureen to Father Pat to address her “dangerous obsession with spookiness and the occult,” according to a review from Newsbusters.

Is It True the Book of Revelation Indicts Big Pharma?

As often happens on radio, I unintentionally stir up a hornet’s nest by giving a straightforward, factual answer to a question that, to my knowledge, is not controversial at all. Soon enough, I learn that, in fact, I have slaughtered a sacred cow without even knowing it.

That’s the case with the subject of the Greek word pharmakia in Revelation 18:23. Does it connect in any way to the use of pharmaceuticals today? Is it an indictment on Big Pharma? Does it tie in with the COVID vaccines?

After explaining to a caller last week that the word simply means “sorcery,” I followed up with an article getting into more depth.

WATCH: 'The Voice' Contestant Lights It Up With Tasha Cobbs Leonard's Anthem to Jesus

Grammy nominee Tasha Cobbs Leonard wowed the world on 2013 with her smash Christian single, "Break Every Chain." She was named Billboard's top gospel artist of the decade in 2020, and the song is still impacting the globe for the gospel today.

Witness contestant Jershika Maple's show-stopping performance of the song on a recent episode of The Voice on NBC. Cobbs would be proud.

Watch the video above and be inspired to take the world for Christ. {eoa}

Read articles like this one and other Spirit-led content in our new platform, CHARISMA PLUS.