

CN Morning Rundown: Public Schools Officially Promoting Pedophilia

Here's a quick summary of the top stories on :

Public Schools Officially Promoting Pedophilia

A mother in northern Virginia unloaded on her city's school board Thursday after discovering what she described as books filled with "pedophilia" on the shelves.

When she left a local high school library, Stacey Langton had two books: "Lawn Boy" by Jonathan Evison and "Gender Queer: A Memoir" by Maia Kobabe. She told the board of Fairfax County Public Schools that, in each book, she found references that "include pedophilia, sex between men and boys" with entries chronicling—in explicit detail—sexual encounters between underage boys and adult males.

"Pornography is offensive to all people," said Langton after she was interrupted by school board members chiding her for reading highly explicit sentences from the two books. "It is offensive to common decency."

Unbelievable Prophecy of the Australian Earthquake Comes to Pass

Ark of Grace Ministries co-founder Amanda Grace, on the Elijah List broadcast hosted by Steve Schultz on July 27, accurately prophesied the 5.9 magnitude earthquake that hit Australia last Wednesday. The record-setting quake was a combination of three earthquakes.

"The 5.9 earthquake is the largest in Victoria in recorded history ... appears to be the largest event we have experienced in the eastern half of the country," according to the research and expert commentary publication, Pursuit, University of Melbourne.

The earthquake was felt across the eastern half of Australia and in Canberra, Adelaide and other towns. Damaged and collapsed buildings can be seen across major networks.

4,000 Doctors Accuse World Governments of Crimes Against Humanity

Over 4,000 doctors have officially taken a stance against the prevailing methods of treating (or not treating for that matter) those suffering from Covid-19.

The Virginia Star reported, “A ‘Physicians Declaration’ produced by an international alliance of physicians and medical scientists strongly condemns the global strategy to treat COVID, accusing policy-makers of potential ‘crimes against humanity’ for preventing physicians from providing life-saving treatments for their patients and suppressing open scientific discussion.”

The Global Covid Summit, taking place in Rome Italy from September 12-14th, published their stance on their website for all to read. {eoa}
