

Congress Calls for Transparency on the Epstein Files

Trying to put the Jeffrey Epstein issue behind him, President Trump's Justice Department has asked a federal court to unseal transcripts from the grand jury that investigated Epstein before his 2019 death in jail.

But Congress wants more, and Republican Representative Tim Burchett (R-TN) is a co-sponsor of the bipartisan Epstein Files Transparency Act, which would force the House to vote on a non-binding resolution urging the Epstein files to be released.

When asked on ABC what exactly the government is withholding, Congressman Burchett said, "That's the million-dollar question."
