Pastor Kent Hart of the church told The Daily Progress that he was in his kitchen on Oct. 27 when he saw to his shock, the ministry van leaving the driveway.

"I'm talking to my daughter, and I look out the window and I see the van leaving my house," Hart told the outlet.

Hart then chased down the vehicle and saw Kelley driving the van.

"I'm like, 'You stole my van, get out of my van,'" Hart said. "And at this point, I see her very clearly. I saw her buzz cut and face tattoo."

Hart said that Kelley drove around his car, but officer Corey Legg initiated a traffic stop, which caught Kelley and the van. In Legg's report, Kelley supposedly said that a man had left the driver's seat of the car and then ran into the woods.

However, after looking at his dashcam footage, only Kelley was seen in the van.

"She began stating she had sold her soul to the devil," officer Legg wrote in his notes.

Kelley was taken to the University of Virginia Medical Center to see if she had anything in her body, testing positive for heroin.

Ground Zero Church ended up taking time to have a service dedicated to praying for Kelley and her family. The church is also raising money to supply themselves with a new van.
