

Cut by the Jets, NFL Player Says God Has Already Written His Season

Antonio Cromartie may be in talks with the Buffalo Bills after the New York Jets cut him, but if his Instagram is any indication, he isn't worried.

"God never gives us something we can't handle. Where ever my Lord places me season it was already written," he posted.

Cromartie spent 11 years with the Jets, an opportunity he praised God for.

"First I would like to give thanks to my Lord and Savior because everything that I've been blessed with is because of you. Thank you again," he posted.

Cromartie played under Rex Ryan for the Jets from 2010-2013, and joining Ryan's Buffalo Bills team doesn't seem to be out of the question, according to ESPN.

The cornerback has 362 tackles, 114 passes defended and 31 interceptions in his career.
