The statement reads:

Following a comprehensive investigation, Daystar learned through counsel today that Colleyville Police Department has officially closed its investigation, with no further action or charges, into allegations of abuse involving a child in the Lamb family.

The original police report filed several years ago alleged that an unidentified classmate of the child committed the alleged abuse. In November 2024, media reports surfaced, falsely accusing another Lamb family member—identified as “Pete” in the reporting—of committing the alleged abuse.

Daystar fully cooperated with law enforcement’s investigation. In addition, “Pete” denied any wrongdoing, and he voluntarily agreed to be interviewed by the Colleyville Police Department. “Pete” also voluntarily sat for and passed two separate lie detector tests performed by two independent, highly experienced experts. No evidence has ever existed implicating “Pete” in any crime, and no charges are being brought against “Pete.” The absence of any wrongdoing by “Pete” is underscored with the closing of this investigation, which further confirms there was never any mishandling—as falsely argued by some on social media—on the part of Daystar and its leadership.

As it has said from day one, Daystar Television Network takes all allegations of sexual misconduct very seriously. We grieve for and give credence to the voice of every victim of abuse. In this matter, however, there is simply no evidence that any alleged abuse was ever committed by “Pete.”

Although saddened by those who were led to believe the gossip, rumors, and false accusations promulgated on social media, Daystar appreciates the love and support it has received from countless viewers and ministry partners and will continue in its mission to spread the Good News of Jesus Christ around the world.

Continue to lift up in prayer all those who have been impacted by this case.
