

Disney, Nickelodeon Creator Charged for Child Porn Possession

It appears that little content still exists that parents can safely allow their children to watch.

Animator Kyle Carrozza was charged for possessing more than 600 images of child pornography, according to USA TODAY.

As USA TODAY notes, the animator has worked on projects for Disney, Cartoon Network, PBS Kids and Nickelodeon. Some of the shows he has had an impact on include "Doc McStuffins," "Adventure Time," "Teen Titans Go!" "Fish Hooks," "Danger Ranger" "Fanboy & Chum Chum" and "The Spongebob Movie: Sponge Out of Water." Carrozza also created the series "Mighty Magiswords."

The 45-year-old content creator has also worked in voice acting as well.

In a post on X, Nico Colaleo who created "Ollie and Scoops," reacted to hearing about Carrozza's arrest.

"I've avoided hanging out with Kyle Carrozza for the 15 years I've known him, but just cuz he gave me a weird vibe. But I didn't realize til about 2 minutes ago that he was doing THIS. He's been arrested for child porn."

Not only have the shows targeted at children become darker, demonic and sexual in nature, but this arrest points out that not all people who work on content for children have pure motives.

In addition to spending time in prayer for the protection of children in regards to the things they are exposed to, we should also pray for godly men and women to rise in the entertainment industry who strive to glorify God with the works of their hands.
