

DOJ Report Reveals Widespread Anti-Christian Bias During Biden Administration

The Department of Justice (DOJ) has uncovered a large range of “anti-Christian” actions that took place under the Biden administration.

According to Fox News, the Biden administration “weaponized the full weight of the federal government against Christians,” reporting that there were “numerous instances” where bias against Christians was exercised by the administration.

The DOJ task force working on the case has set out to make sure that “any unlawful and improper conduct, policies, or practices that target Christians are identified, terminated, and rectified.”

In the DOJ findings shared by Fox News, some of the examples of bias under the Biden administration included less government help to Christians demographics, such as: “limited humanitarian relief to Christians relative to other populations and offered muted responses to attacks on Christians compared to other groups.”

Another element that the Biden administration got rid of included the Department of Labor (DOL)'s "Office of Faith Based Initiatives" which was replaced instead with a "Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Office." The Department of Housing spent time discriminating against Christian holidays through their marketing efforts compared to other notable celebrations, while the Department of State (DOS) treated non-Christian employees in a higher regard than those who hold a Christian faith.

The DOJ's findings make it clear just how close we came to seeing our Christian freedoms completely eroded. We were not merely observing unfair policies—we were witnessing a tangible threat to the ability of Christians to practice their faith freely without institutional disadvantage or discrimination.
