As Charisma News previously reported, Daybell believed murdering her two children was “her mission to set her children free from their earthly bodies,” because she saw it as part of the work of the 144,000 for Christ’s return.

Now, the depraved mother tells NBC she believes both she and her husband will be exonerated because of a supernatural revelation she claims to have had.

“I have seen things in the future that Jesus showed me when I was in heaven,” Daybell says. “And we were not in jail, and we were not in prison, and they were still in the future, from now.”

This just goes to show the complete deception that she is under. Chad Daybell was found guilty of murdering his wife’s two children, Joshua “JJ” Vallow and Tylee Ryan, along with his first wife, Tammy Daybell. For these despicable crimes, Daybell is currently awaiting the death sentence. Lori has also been sentenced to life in prison.

Lori Vallow Daybell's claim that she received a "supernatural revelation" from Jesus, justifying the murders of her two children, illustrates the devastating power of Satan's deception.

Her belief that killing her children was a divine mission to "set them free" reveals how easily people can be misled by distorted, cult-like teachings. This tragic case highlights Satan's strategy of manipulating minds, convincing individuals that destructive actions are somehow aligned with God's will, all in an effort to steal, kill and destroy.
