

End Times? Under-Skin 'Vaccination Mark' Now Being Developed

Researchers have found a way to leave a "mark" under the skin that will enable medical authorities to know whether someone has been vaccinated or not. This "mark" is created using a specialized dye that is not visible to the naked eye, and the dye is delivered under the skin as part of the vaccination process.

If that sounds quite creepy, it's because it is creepy.

MIT researchers have now developed a novel way to record a patient's vaccination history: storing the data in a pattern of dye, invisible to the naked eye, that is delivered under the skin at the same time as the vaccine.

"In areas where paper vaccination cards are often lost or do not exist at all, and electronic databases are unheard of, this technology could enable the rapid and anonymous detection of patient vaccination history to ensure that every child is vaccinated," says Kevin McHugh, a former MIT postdoctoral student who is now an assistant professor of bioengineering at Rice University.

The MIT article announcing this discovery states that this research had been funded "by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation and the Koch Institute Support (core) Grant from the National Cancer Institute."

In order to see the "mark" left behind by the specialized dye, authorities will need a "specially equipped smartphone," and it's reported that the "mark" can be read for at least five years after the initial injection.

You may be envisioning a long needle as the delivery system, but that is not the case. The scientists involved in this research intend for a “microneedle patch” to deliver the vaccine and the dye at the same time.

The researchers designed their dye to be delivered by a microneedle patch rather than a traditional syringe and needle. Such patches are now being developed to deliver vaccines for measles, rubella and other diseases, and the researchers showed that the dye could be easily incorporated into these patches.

The “microneedles” on each patch would consist of a mixture that includes dissolvable sugar, and once applied to human skin they would “partially dissolve,” releasing their payload within about two minutes. By selectively loading microparticles into microneedles, the patches deliver a pattern in the skin that is invisible to the naked eye but can be scanned with a smartphone that has the infrared filter removed.

To many, this invention may sound like a much less painful method to deliver vaccines and a great way to keep track of who has been vaccinated. But for many others, this technology is a giant move in the wrong direction. In addition to being a gross violation of privacy rights, many are concerned that we could eventually be approaching the days warned about in Revelation 13:16-18 (KJV):

“And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads: And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name. Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is Six hundred threescore and six.”

According to the Bible, someday people will not be able to perform basic day-to-day activities without the mark of the beast.

And even now, we are being warned that those that do not take a COVID vaccine may not be able to live normal lives. Just consider what Ontario's Chief Medical Officer Dr. David Williams just said, "What we can do is to say sometimes for access or ease of getting into certain settings, if you don't have vaccination then you're not allowed into that setting without other protection materials," he said.

"What may be mandatory is proof of ... vaccination in order to have latitude and freedom to move around ... without wearing other types of personal protective equipment," Williams added.

We are going to need proof that we have been vaccinated "in order to have latitude and freedom to move around"?

I don't like the sound of that at all.

Will we eventually get to a point where we are not allowed to go to work and our kids are not allowed to go to school without a COVID vaccine?

And could such restrictions foreshadow a day when an even more sinister scheme appears on the global stage?

These are such unusual times, and right now a war for our minds is going on.

If we do not stand up and object to the increasingly oppressive restrictions that are being instituted now, what will we do when even more draconian measures are instituted during the years ahead?

I don't know about you, but I will not ever allow anyone to put any sort of a "mark" on or under my skin.

Others may willingly line up to be branded like cattle, but I will not be among them. {eoa}

Michael Snyder is the author of four books, he has been a frequent guest on major radio and television shows all over the nation, and his websites have been viewed more than 100 million times.

Originally published at End Of The American Dream. Reposted with permission.