

Fauci Admits: COVID Rules Were Made Up

Anthony Fauci is admitting his great lie to the world.

As the Daily Mail reported, Fauci created the “six feet apart” rule and other precautionary measures because he felt he was “protecting” Americans.

During a hearing with Republicans on the House Select Subcommittee about the coronavirus, Fauci admitted that the rules in place “sort of just appeared.”

“Do you recall when discussions regarding, kind of, the at-least-a-6-foot threshold began?” Fauci was asked.

He asked if the question was related to distancing in schools, and it was clarified that the committee wanted to know about the overall distancing protocol.

“You know, I don’t recall. It sort of just appeared,” Fauci replied. Fauci further stated that he was not aware of any studies that supported the 6-foot distancing rule. Fauci also did not review on data on whether or not children in schools should have masked up to avoid the spread of the virus. In fact, he still sees the issue as ‘up in the air’ as to whether or not if the studies that have found student developmental issues from wearing masks are true.

In his testimony statement, Fauci said, “For at least two decades before the SARS-CoV-2 virus that caused the COVID-19 pandemic emerged, NIAID had invested billions of dollars in basic and clinical research that led to the development of mRNA platform technology and structure-based immunogen design that ultimately led to the development of safe and highly effective vaccines for COVID-19.”

Fauci also said he “knew nothing” about aide David Morens’ actions of trying to hide official communication by using a private Gmail account to conduct business related to the origins of COVID.

“Another unfounded accusation that has circulated is that I actively tried to minimize and ‘cover up’ the possibility that the SARS-CoV-2 virus originated from a laboratory,” Fauci wrote in his statement. “Assertions have been made that my e-mails proved this supposed ‘cover up.’ In fact, those emails prove exactly the opposite, namely, that I was proactive in making sure that any possible ‘laboratory leak’ was actively investigated.”

Fauci further said, “Let me state for the record that to the best of my knowledge I have never conducted official business via my personal email.”
