

Federal Judge Releases Jeffrey Epstein's Alleged Suicide Note From Jail Cell

The purported suicide note of disgraced New York financier Jeffrey Epstein was released by a federal judge Wednesday.

The note was reportedly found by Epstein's cellmate, Nicholas Tartaglione, inside of a graphic novel belonging to Epstein in July 2019 in the Metropolitan Correctional Center in Lower Manhattan, New York.

The note was found just after Epstein unsuccessfully attempted to hang himself in his jail cell in July 2019, after he was arrested for crimes related to sex trafficking.

Tartaglione kept the note to prove he did not attempt to kill Epstein, per the New York Post.

The judge who oversaw Tartaglione's case, Federal District Judge Kenneth Karas of White Plains, New York, released the note after The New York Times petitioned to have the document unsealed.

The handwritten note – which is barely legible – appears to say the following:

They investigated me for months – FOUND NOTHING!!!

So 16 year old charge results!

It is a treat to be able to choose one's time to say goodbye

Watcha want me to do – Bust out cryin!!

NO FUN – NOT WORTH IT!!
