

Freedom and Faith Collide Over 'Ground Zero Mosque' Film

Imagine if priests taught Catechism and a Vatican world government to Catholics at Sunday Mass? Cries of First Amendment rights and "separation of Church and State" would blast out of media outlets to crush the idea of a Catholic theocracy in America.

But the media is silent on Imams, Sharia Law and a mosque within site of "Ground Zero."

A documentary film seeks to break the silence at its West Coast Premiere on April 9, 2011.

The Ground Zero Mosque: The Second Wave of 9/11 Attacks, a documentary of D-Day and 9/11 rallies to protest the building of an Islamic center in lower Manhattan, illustrates how different Islam and Sharia Law is from faith in the United States.
