

‘Give Me the Baby’: Good Samaritan’s Bold Dash to Save a Missing Child

A good Samaritan in Tennessee saved a missing baby over the weekend.

The accused, Gerald Blair, the boyfriend of Maybrie’s mom, was reportedly fleeing after an alleged hit-and-run and went into the woods with Maybrie. On Saturday, James learned through a neighbor’s camera the two were by a creek outside his home, and he promptly took action, WTVF-TV reported.

Steven James told WTVF-TV how he came to encounter the man with the child, 1-year-old Maybrie Like. It all started Friday night, when the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation issued an alert about a missing child, and police asked to search James’ property.

“It was a kid,” James said of his decisive moves. “I’d do anything for a kid.”

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

The brave hero went out and confronted Blair, using his firearm in an attempt to end the standoff.