

GOP Headquarters Torched, Suspect Linked to Antifa Movement

Federal authorities have charged 40-year-old Jamison Wagner of Albuquerque, New Mexico, with arson in connection to two separate incidents: the firebombing of a Tesla dealership and an attack on the New Mexico Republican Party headquarters.□

According to the Department of Justice, Wagner allegedly set fire to two Tesla Model Y vehicles at a dealership in Bernalillo on Feb. 9.

Graffiti at the scene included phrases like “Die Elon” and “Tesla Nazi Inc.” On March 30, he is accused of igniting a fire at the GOP headquarters in Albuquerque, where “ICE=KKK” was spray-painted on the building.

Investigators linked Wagner to both incidents through surveillance footage, traffic camera data and evidence recovered from his residence. A search of his home revealed eight suspected incendiary devices, spray paint, and a stencil matching the graffiti found at the GOP office.
