

If It Sounds Like a Terrorist and Seems Like a Terrorist, It Is a Terrorist

America's university campuses are burning with antisemitism, a byproduct of the liberal ideology that has, for years, dominated the upper echelons of academia and poisoned the minds of so many of America's youth.

We are witnessing a twisted generation of college students on campuses from coast to coast. What started out under the false guise of "peaceful protests" in support of a cease-fire in Israel manifested into its true form—the latest in a long history of hatred for Israel. Now, terrorist-sympathizing college students are inching closer to the level of antisemitic violence we've come to expect from terrorist groups like Hamas.

For nearly 30 years, the world has designated Hamas as the terrorist organization that it is. Its goal is the erasure of Israel, and it has used fear and violence to accomplish that goal. When students at Columbia, UCLA and elsewhere start acting like terrorists, we should treat them just that way.

We must root out who's funding these violent, hate-driven riots. We sanction countries that sponsor terrorism and must bring the hammer down on whatever individuals or groups are supporting these silver-spoon, Ivy-League jihadists. Don't let the nose rings and blue hair fool you—this is international terrorism. The rioters holding the campuses of Columbia and UCLA hostage are certainly committing international terrorism.
