

Inspiring Film Documenting Rise of 'Let Us Worship' Movement Coming to On Demand

Grab some hot chocolate and a pair of pajamas because the hit film documenting the inspiring story of the rise of the "Let Us Worship" movement is going to be available on Digital and DVD this weekend.

"We are finally at the place where we are releasing our film "Superspreader" on on-demand streaming," Feucht says in a Charisma News interview.

On Dec. 3, 2022 the documentary will be available to stream on to anyone around the world. Following the COVID lockdowns and churches closing their doors, an explosive movement of the body of Christ leaving the church began, with multitudes hitting the streets to worship.

"Superspreader" hit the top five movies in America when it released, ranking number one in Los Angeles, California. Now people across the world can watch the documentary.

Feucht and his team have partnered with the Holy Spirit to open a door for those who don't believe in Jesus to watch emboldened Christians come together and praise the Lord.

It's an hour where God is raising up a bride with pure, authentic hearts to see Him glorified throughout the world.

"When the Lord breathed on the story, it became a movie and it was never our plan, God writes the stories and does what he wants," Feucht says. He highlights the most shocking testimony from the release has been the revival breaking out in cities littered with crime and perversion. "They were flipped when the film started playing they were turned to altars of worship. We had altar calls in the theatres across America," he says.
