

Is the Biden Administration Using Abortion to Codify Future Healthcare Mandates?

Read Time: 2 minutes 9 seconds

In less than two weeks the country will head to the polls and cast their votes in the midterms elections. One hot topic on the mind of Americans along with the economy and gas prices is Roe v. Wade. The polarizing debate could have significant impacts on the future of government control over health care in the country.

In a recent White House press briefing journalist Dr. Anthony Harper asked White House Press Secretary Karine Jean-Pierre about a child's right to life in abortion.

Pierre says President Joe Biden plans on codifying Roe v. Wade after the midterm elections saying, "The president has been very clear on this piece, which is that the way that we make Roe into law is to make sure that we have legislation and we codify it."

Reporters have continued to question the Biden Administration on the specifics of their plans with abortion, but Jean-Pierre has remained quiet.

Fox News reported that on Sept. 23 Peter Doocy questioned Jean-Pierre on Biden's stance on abortion asking how many weeks Biden would want to limit abortion. His question was dodged and Jean-Pierre would not give a clear answer. "What Republicans are trying to do is take us backwards. They are trying to take away the rights and freedoms of Americans," she said.

Those rights and freedoms are what many American Christians are concerned about today. For 50 years, an unborn baby didn't have rights or freedoms. Believers across the country saw the overturning of Roe v. Wade as a victory for the kingdom of heaven.

If the Biden administration codifies Roe, could that open the door to more government mandates on health care? What about COVID vaccine mandates? The point of overturning Roe v. Wade was to put the power in the hands of the people to elect state representatives to make those decisions based on what the people believe.

In 2021 alone at least 49,000 people quit their jobs or were disciplined for not getting the COVID vaccination, the New York Times reported. The United States government required millions of workers around the country to take the vaccination.

The Biden Administration's stance on putting all of the power into the hands of the government to make decisions is concerning. Believers around the country are watching closely and paying attention to the signs of the times we are living in. With rumors of wars, earthquakes, famine and the mark of the beast all signaling the return of Jesus the world is watching closely.

Christians need to register to vote and head to the polls on Election Day, Nov. 8th. Research the candidates to see what their stance is regarding biblical values in the country. Pray for the leaders over this country that God would open their eyes and their hearts to step into His will.

Jesus is preparing His bride for His return. Now is the time to get oil in your lamps and spread the good news with those around you. {eo}
