

Is This World-Changing Transformation Going Unnoticed?

Our freedoms as Americans may be eroding before our very eyes, yet end-times expert Michael Snyder says that barely anyone is watching.

This week, under the towering presence of the United Nations headquarters in New York, leaders from every corner of the globe gathered for the much-anticipated “2023 SDG Summit.” This summit marked a pivotal moment in history, as nations committed to fully implement the 2030 Agenda—or as many kingdom leaders have referred to it as “The Great Reset”—and the Sustainable Development Goals within the next seven years.

Many kingdom leaders believe that this is the large empire described in Revelation 13 that the Antichrist will rule with great power and authority given to him by Satan.

The 17 Sustainable Development Goals, often seen as a blueprint for global governance, encompass nearly every facet of human activity. Achieving them by the 2030 deadline would require extraordinary efforts and dedication from all nations. This was precisely the mission undertaken by world leaders during the summit—a new phase of accelerated progress toward these ambitious goals.

The official UN webpage for the summit describes it as an event “marking the beginning of a new phase of accelerated progress towards the Sustainable Development Goals with high-level political guidance on transformative and accelerated actions leading up to 2030.”

In an unprecedented move, global leaders adopted a sweeping Political Declaration during the summit, recommitting themselves to eradicating poverty, combating inequalities and forging peaceful societies. The document emphasized the urgency of reversing declines and accelerating progress toward the 2030 Agenda.

So the question begs, "Will this be a utopia or hell on earth?"

Pastor John Hagee says that won't matter for those who are loyal to Jesus Christ, but those who aren't will be made to suffer.

"What's going to happen on this earth will be hell on earth," Hagee says. "We, the bride of Christ, are going to be in heaven. People who teach that we are going to go through hell that are just simply biblically misinformed. We are members of the bride of Christ. Jesus is the blessed hope. There is nothing hopeful of living through seven years of hell to prove that you love Jesus. The Lord is going to take us to heaven. We are going to miss this chaos that's going to happen on the earth and then Jesus Christ is going to return at the end of seven years."

Pastor, author and end times expert Michael Youssef asks, "How do we make sure this 'world authority' rules wisely and benevolently?"

Youssef says it's a matter of deception, and many people will give into it.

"These yearning utopians make an unthinking assumption that their world government will be run by people of goodwill," Youssef writes. "But history shows that big governments tend to produce either clumsily inefficient bureaucracies or ruthlessly oppressive dictatorships."

As nations commit to these lofty goals, questions arise about the means employed to achieve them. One example is the implementation of a 20-mph speed limit on residential roads in Wales, a stark illustration of the extreme measures that may soon become commonplace worldwide in pursuit of climate-related targets.

One key revelation within the Political Declaration is the reference to the “Summit of the Future” scheduled for 2024. This event holds particular significance as it falls just two months before the next U.S. presidential election.

At this summit, UN member states are set to adopt a “Pact for the Future.” This pact, detailed on the official UN website, underscores the creation of an “Emergency Platform” that could be activated in response to global shocks.

This Emergency Platform grants the United Nations substantial authority to ensure a unified, global response to crises, encompassing pandemics, outer space events and unforeseen risks. The potential for the extension of these emergency powers indefinitely raises concerns about the concentration of global authority within the UN.

Despite these concerns, the Biden administration is firmly in favor of the plan, poised to adopt the “Pact for the Future” next September. The rush to implement this plan aligns with the globalists’ desire to advance their agenda while sympathetic leaders are in power.

These developments underscore the urgency of understanding the globalists’ intentions and the potential erosion of freedoms in these perilous times. While the mainstream media often remains silent on these matters, it is vital for citizens to remain informed and vigilant about the evolving landscape of global governance.{eoa}
