

Israel Launches Spy Satellite

Israel launched its Ofek 19 military spy satellite this week, a development Defense Minister Israel Katz said was an “achievement of the highest global level.”

Katz wrote on X, “This is also a message to all our enemies, wherever they may be – we are keeping an eye on you at all times and in every situation. And in general, a message to the peoples of the region – come collaborate with these capabilities for a better shared future for all of us.”

“Thanks to the remarkable human capital we have, Israel has the capabilities to be a leading power in the field of space, in a domain where intellect matters more than population size or territorial expanse,” he added. “I intend, together with all those involved in the endeavor, to place great emphasis on the field of satellites and space and to advance it with full force forward.”

Israel’s Ministry of Foreign Affairs described the Ofek 19 satellite as a “highly advanced SAR (synthetic aperture radar) observation satellite with enhanced capabilities.” Upon entering Earth’s orbit, the satellite will undergo tests to ensure its “integrity and performance.”

The nation’s president, Isaac Herzog, said of the satellite’s launch, “We are not just a start-up nation – we are also a space nation.” He stated the launch is a “moment that sums up years of exceptional work – professional, focused, and inspiring.”
