

Israel's Response

Compassionate

It has been two months to the day that a magnitude 7.0 earthquake rocked Haiti, leaving scores of people dead and thousands wounded. Within days of the quake, an Israeli medical team of doctors, nurses and other personnel arrived in the region and erected a state-of-the-art field hospital that the media called the "Rolls Royce" of emergency medical care. Israel's readiness comes from experience. Being the victims of war has taught Israelis how to respond to crisis. Watch the video below.
