

JD Vance Opens Up About His Faith, the Rosary and Trusting Jesus

Vice President JD Vance is getting candid about his faith and what trusting in Jesus looks like for his high-profile political life.

In a recent post by Catholics for Catholics, Vance described in a video interview with Bishop Robert Barron how praying the rosary and trusting in Jesus have been essential for his faith journey.

"In the morning, I will try to do a decade of the rosary, and then before I go to bed as well," Vance stated. "And that's just kind the Alpha, our Father, do the Glory be to the Hail Mary..."

Vance stated that his family prays before dinner and that he is trying to get his children to pray more on their own. Barron also asked if Vance keeps a rosary or a crucifix in his pocket as a reminder.

"The 'Jesus I trust in You' I probably say that a dozen times a day," Vance said.

JD Vance says he prays a decade of the Rosary every morning and evening and recalls the 'Jesus, I trust in You' prayer multiple times daily.

Ask Christ for help. Pray the rosary daily.

As Charisma previously reported, Vance has consistently pointed back to his Christian faith as the foundation of both his personal life and public service. He has also defended the importance of religious freedom, emphasizing that faith was never meant to be confined to the walls of a church but lived boldly in every sphere of society. His willingness to speak openly about prayer, trusting Jesus and depending on God stands in sharp contrast to a culture that often encourages believers to keep their faith private.

In a world filled with uncertainty and constant noise, perhaps the greatest challenge for believers isn't simply to profess faith—but to cultivate the kind of steadfast trust that remains anchored in Jesus no matter what lies ahead.
