

Justin Bieber: Mark My Words, Jesus Loves You

Justin Bieber launched into the gospel first thing at his recent performance in Sydney, Australia.

“Mark my words Jesus Loves you,” the pop star scrawled on a transparent board before singing. Bieber reportedly told the crowd it was the “best night of his life.”

The pop star also recently got several new tattoos that media speculate may have something to do with his faith: one, a roaring bear and the other, a soaring eagle.

Vanity Fair even speculated the ink may be part of end-times prophecies coming to pass. Yes, really.

“This particular political moment would be the time for such things—ancient warnings coming true, etc.—wouldn’t it?” Richard Lawson wrote.

“We’ll have to synthesize that interpretation with our understanding of Bieber’s second new tattoo, which is a mighty, screaming eagle, festooned right across his abdomen,” Lawson continued. “This one is ... situated just above Bieber’s belly button and just below his ‘Son of God’ tattoo. So perhaps the eagle is a manifestation of the Son of God.”

What do you think? Sound off below! {eoa}