

Kanye West Just Rebooted His Sunday Service and It's More Bizarre Than Ever!

Kanye West continues to stun the world, and not in the best way.

After going to the Grammy Awards with Bianca Censori last month when her sheer dress left absolutely nothing to the imagination, West is now moving back to his Sunday Service routine.

West made the announcement of his Sunday Service return on Instagram, according to the Daily Mail. Besides being in a strange stage of life where he publicly rejected God last year, the return of West's Sunday Service comes with an additional element.

As West chooses male vocalists to be part of his choir, he is requiring them shave their heads if they are selected. Those who are ages five and up can try out for the choir.

If the return of the speculative, cult-like Sunday Services wasn't enough, Vibe also confirmed that West is currently working on a new album he says has an "antisemitic sound" called "Bully." The outlet also noted that the services will return this upcoming Sunday, Mar. 16.

With all kinds of racial and ethnic hatred being displayed by West, along with his degradation of Jesus' Lordship, we need to be praying for him. This is not the time to place the singer on a pedestal, but rather interceding that the truth of the Gospel would transform both his heart and his mind, so he can truly experience freedom and healing.
