

Kari Jobe, Cody Carnes Announce They're Expecting a New Baby

Christian music artist Kari Jobe has something new in the works, but not a new album—a baby!

The worship leader shared the heartwarming announcement on Instagram, posting a photo of her 2-year-old son with the words “BIG BROTHER” written on the sidewalk in chalk.

Jobe, who's married to Christian musician Cody Carnes, captioned the post: “New Baby Carnes February 2019.”

This will be her second child with her husband and fellow worship leader.

“I love being a mommy,” Jobe previously told CBN News. “I love spending time with my son. And even though he can only smile and throw food on me for now, I love to just be with him. I think it has helped me slow down more while I lead and just wait in God’s presence and just enjoy the environment of His Spirit.”

Jobe shared her first pregnancy with her sister, Kris, who was also pregnant. But just before Christmas 2015, Kris lost her baby.

Jobe said that experience sent her “entire family into this season of extreme disappointment, heartache and trauma.”
