"About nine months or so after I surrendered everything to Jesus, my will, my plans, I received a prophecy that I was called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ, and I was called to reach the nations and walk in miracles. And I was so shocked because public speaking was my biggest fear and weakness, and I had no desire to speak, to preach, to minister," Krick says.

Krick shared how at first she experienced ministry woes, but even through her own fears and doubts, God continued to use her. She even saw an entire group of children who suffered from HIV be completely healed and restored through the power of God after praying over them to be healed and delivered.

Krick encourages viewers to have faith and believe for healing, especially for those watching who may need a miracle. This includes the power of God to heal diseases, open blind eyes and bring clarity to those with mental struggles.

“Isaiah 10:27 says that the yoke shall be destroyed because of the anointing,” Krick says. “And what the anointing is the power of God, the power of God that God puts in a vessel. God’s way of healing and delivering is by His power moving through vessels. This is what we see when He told the disciples [to] cast out demons.”

Krick also expresses the importance of understanding and God’s ways when it comes to deliverance. Instead of just crying out to be delivered from something, we are to seek Him fully in the correct biblical context. She further explains the importance of renouncing the spirits and generational curses trying to tear down the believer’s life. We are living in a time of revival, and God wants us to be fully-present in this mighty and powerful move He is sweeping through.

“I believe revival is now,” Krick says. “What I’ve seen with my own eyes, I’ve seen God’s power move so mightily, have no limits, move through the screen and heal people and deliver people from all kinds of oppression and sickness. It is truly now.”

With a bold call to embrace God’s miraculous healing and deliverance, Krick’s story is a reminder that when we surrender our plans and align with God’s purpose, He can use us to release His power into the world.
