

Kim Clement Rushed to Hospital With Brain Bleed

Prophetic voice Kim Clement has been hospitalized with bleeding on the brain.

Clement's ministry posted a prayer request on his Facebook page on Monday, noting that he was being rushed to the emergency room with numbness on his right side.

"We are asking everybody to please pray and agree with us for God's miraculous power, intervention, peace and for Kim's speedy recovery," the post said.

An update several hours later revealed doctors discovered bleeding in his brain. That update was followed by another prayer request.

"We are asking everybody to please pray and agree with us now for God's miraculous power, supernatural intervention, peace and for Kim's speedy recovery," the Facebook post reads. "Please pray for Jane and their family during this difficult time. We anticipate the inevitable, supernatural intervention of God."

In the middle of the night, a third update appeared on the social media site.

"Thank you for your continued prayers for Kim. He is being treated now with medications to take down the swelling and they will see if they can control it that way," the post reads. "They will reassess him in the morning to see how he is responding. We are so grateful for your prayers and love. Please keep them coming, as he and Jane and their children need them now more than ever. The power of prayer is a remarkable thing!"

According to Clement's website, his prophetic ministry reaches countless people as he reveals the heartbeat of God in tragedy and triumph, good times and bad, war and peace, in democratic or theocratic circles, crossing all cultural barriers by communicating God's feelings for them.

"Prophets were called to watch, which sometimes demanded unusual and difficult journeys," he has said. "Isaiah was privy to the conversation of God, and heard them discussing the future of Israel. However, Elisha heard the plans of the enemy and revealed them to the king, placing himself in a very difficult position. I myself must also mount the watchtower."

Let's keep praying for Clement and his family.
