During his Monday morning commute, a suicidal man tragically jumped in front of an oncoming train while holding his 5-year-old daughter, killing himself—but, miraculously, the young child somehow survived.

In a gut-wrenching video, the young girl can be seen crawling out from underneath the train and begging the good Samaritans helping her to call an ambulance for her daddy.

According to the police, the 45-year-old man was holding his daughter when he jumped in front of a train at the Kingsbridge Road station in the Bronx after it rounded a curve to stop.
