

Massive Pyramid Shafts Could Be Tied to End-Times Prophecy

Have scientists just stumbled upon a gateway to the underworld beneath the sands of Egypt?

That's the buzz surrounding a recent discovery by a team of researchers from Italy and the United Kingdom. Using high-frequency electromagnetic waves, similar to ground-penetrating radar, the team claims to have uncovered what they call an "entire hidden world" beneath the Pyramid of Khafre at Giza. Their findings suggest the presence of massive spiral shafts and chamber-like structures that descend over 4,000 feet into the earth—deeper than anything previously known at the site.

If confirmed, this discovery could rewrite ancient history. And according to some, it might even tie directly to biblical prophecy.

While mainstream archaeologists are quick to dismiss the data as flawed or inconclusive, the researchers behind the project remain confident, stating their findings have an 85 to 90% confidence level. Yet, instead of open investigation, the reaction from the archaeological community has largely been resistance.

That resistance hasn't stopped others from speaking out—especially those who have been warning for decades that sites like Giza may hold far more than relics of ancient civilizations. L.A. Marzulli, an expert on the Nephilim and pre-flood world history, weighed in on the news.

"We believe that what we're looking at is pre-flood and it's fallen angel technology, Nephilim architecture. That's what it is," Marzulli says.

And he didn't stop there.

"I've never believed for a second... you know Zahi Hawass with all due respect, and he goes off, you know, 'The Egyptians were great builders' and all this other nonsense. And it's just like, excuse me—they did not build the Great Pyramid."

Marzulli went on to highlight a little-known fact about the Great Pyramid's structure. "The pyramid is not a four-sided pyramid. It's an eight-sided pyramid," he says. "Each side, instead of being straight across, is slightly convex. But you don't see that unless you're in the air... They didn't even know that until someone flew over with an airplane and went, 'Wait a minute, this thing's got eight sides.'"

It's these kinds of architectural anomalies, coupled with the sheer size and engineering precision of the pyramids, that fuel speculation about their true origins and purpose.

Could these mysterious underground shafts be what Revelation 9 describes as the "bottomless pit"? The biblical passage reads: "Then the fifth angel sounded: And I saw a star fallen from heaven to the earth. To him was given the key to the bottomless pit. And he opened the bottomless pit, and smoke arose out of the pit like the smoke of a great furnace," (Rev. 9:1-2).

In the English Standard Version, it even reads: "He opened the shaft of the bottomless pit." A shaft. A deep, spiraling tunnel. A chamber hidden far below the surface.

Coincidence?

We're not saying the bottomless pit has been found—but we are saying this demands serious investigation. Why resist further excavation if there's nothing to hide?

Others have floated alternative theories. Some believe the pyramids were ancient power plants. Temperatures at those depths can reach over 100 degrees Celsius, enough to generate superheated steam.

Others, like engineer Christopher Dunn and inventor Nikola Tesla, believed the pyramids harnessed natural energy or resonant vibrations. Still, some even suggest they were ancient weapons of mass destruction, wielding a now-lost science.

But one thing is becoming increasingly clear: The pyramids are not just tombs.

Proverbs 25:2 says, "It is the glory of God to conceal a matter; to search out a matter is the glory of kings." Daniel 12:4 speaks of a time at the end when "knowledge shall increase." That time may be now.

As we continue to uncover things long hidden beneath our feet, believers must stay alert, grounded in Scripture and filled with discernment.

Jesus warned in Matthew 16:3, "You know how to interpret the appearance of the sky, but you cannot interpret the signs of the times."

Let's not be blind to the signs.
